Nuclear Cardiology

Clinical training in nuclear cardiology is provided through weekday experiences in both the Department of Radiology and in Vanderbilt Heart and Vascular Institute. In both, hands on training occur in performance of exercise and pharmacological stress testing and processing and interpretation of nuclear cardiac imaging, including positron emission tomography. Fellows also acquire experience in preparation and administration of radioisotopes used in nuclear cardiac imaging. The nuclear lab is staffed by fellows Monday through Friday from 8 am to 5 pm.